

Featuring Egg Rock
by Haley Stegeman

People
lakeview edition

...and more from
Joshua Hall
Daria Ghasemi
Grace Heinrekson
Hannah Liebee
Justin Genzler
Emary Langhorn
Hannah Winkler
JD Nassab
Cy Booth
Grace White
Connor Locke
Marco Herrejon
and Cailey Roe

Featuring
Embarassed Yet?
by Cole Franklin

People
lakeview edition

...and more from
Justin Gentzler
Jake Saylor
Kathryn Figurio
Genesis Herring
Matthew Dieleman
Mallory Trager
Bjorn Carlson
Kaeley Patrick
Samantha Taylor
and Hannah Liebee

Viking Fever

by Grant Herrejon

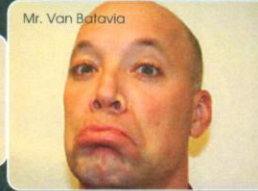

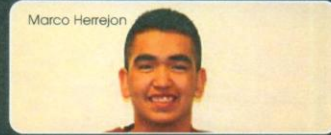

"The Vikings are the best team ever," said Mr. Grant Herrejon during a press conference on February 27th, 2012 at 3:00 p.m. in the University of Colorado. He had just finished a press conference for a team of 100. Mr. Herrejon gave his insight to the press that he had just finished a press conference for the 100th anniversary of the founding of the University of Colorado. He was very much interested in the Vikings for the press conference.

"What was your biggest moment?" I asked, the reporter asked. "When the Vikings won the game in 1912 and the 'Swedish Team' was founded that he was so excited by the Vikings because the first year of his team in the Viking training camp they were very happy. As the Vikings won the game, I asked him if he was going to his dad. Showing this emotion, he replied quickly, "Yes," he replied quickly to Mr. Van Batavia's question, "when he says things with anyone. Especially his wife. When I asked who he would like to see, he replied, "My wife, because I love her." And as Mr. Van Batavia has proved, something was also given to the reporter to give to all of our friends.

Home to Grandma

by Kasey Patrick

On February 27th 2012 I had the chance to interview Marco Herrejon. It was a very fun and exciting time. I started out by asking him some very simple yes or no questions. Then I asked him the question "who are you most happy for now?" He responded slowly "um, my aunt because she just had twins." I asked him after that about a time he saw one of his friends very happy or excited. He responded quickly, "when one of my friends grandparents came from another country." Then I asked him about a time he was very happy or excited. He thought for a second then replied by saying, "Whenever my grandma came from Mexico and I met her." I thanked him and he left.

Embarrassed Yet?

by Cole Franklin

Haley Irene Stegeman, the ravishing smiling girl! After getting one of the most interesting interviews from Haley at the media center on February 27, 2012 at 8:55 A.M. I realized there have been some embarrassing moments the world must hear.

I started off with the simplest of questions; are you embarrassed of yourself? She replied, "just occasionally," while saying this she was smiling and flipping her hair. Eventually, though, I led up to the more embarrassing questions. I asked her, "tell me a time that you have been so embarrassed you almost cried." Haley replied saying, "when I was in orchestra one day my friend pantsed me and the whole orchestra class saw. The teacher didn't see but I went running out of the room." I went on asking, "how do you and your friend get along now?" She replied by saying, "we didn't talk for like, two weeks, but we are fine now." During most of this interview she was smiling and laughing, so I have good hopes she has gotten over it.

students) (GET REAL

Austyn Moore

Lena Berhane

Mrs. Beasley

Jalayah Burton

DJ Andon

Embarrassed Girl Spills Story by Central Locks

"It was 3rd grade, and I like, threw up in front of the whole class! I was really embarrassed, and it wasn't really that funny, at least not to me." It was a regular day at Lakeview Middle School at 10:25 A.M. as I interviewed Lena Avism Berhane in the library.

Throughout the interview, I found that Lena gets embarrassed pretty easily-especially by her parents. She's a good sport about it, though, and gets over most things easily by laughing it off with everyone else. She also can appreciate when others get embarrassed-like her sister. "My sister was ice-skating and she fell. It was like, really funny!" Yes, I think we can all agree that is funny.

Overall, it was an interesting interview. I thanked her and we went back to class.

Mrs. Beasley's Christmas Vacation Exposed! by Jake Saylor

"On a beach, with a bright sun" Mrs. Beasley, also known as Terry Lee Beasley, answered to my question "When are you happiest?" I had the chance to interview this wonderful teacher at Lakeview Middle School on the 27th of February, 2012. We met up at her place of business, the Media Center in Lakeview at 8:55a.m. I wanted to get to know her, and discuss some of her happiest moments. One of which was absolutely fantastic, and I just had to write about it in this article.

It was Christmas of 2003, her, and her family had scheduled a cruise for the summer, but found a better deal if they went over Christmas. So, off they went to Belize, Central America. That was her answer to my question of, "Can you tell me a story of your happiest moment?" She had given me that after she was in deep concentration, looking to her right. She also gave me some details like, they visited, and climbed some ancient Mayan ruins. Her family had lucked out, because they found hieroglyphics engraved into the ruins, and it just so happened their tour guide could read those. She explained to me that some of them were dates, and calendars, some were about gods. Mrs. Beasley reported that she couldn't remember all of what they said, because it was a while ago. She seemed intrigued while telling me this story and kept eye contact nearly the whole time. This trip must have been something. I also had the opportunity to take a wonderful picture of Mrs. Beasley herself.

Poor Man

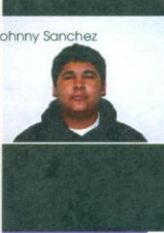

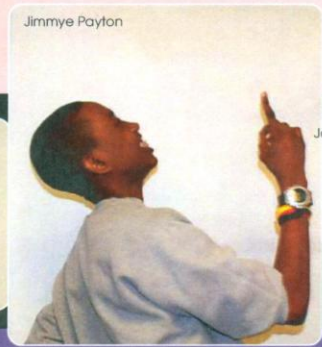

by Mallory Trager

The way it felt like I was in a room. The way it felt like I was sitting in a car. Sarah Berhane was with a teacher, and I was with a friend. The way it felt like I was in a room. The way it felt like I was sitting in a car. Sarah Berhane was with a teacher, and I was with a friend. The way it felt like I was in a room. The way it felt like I was sitting in a car. Sarah Berhane was with a teacher, and I was with a friend. The way it felt like I was in a room. The way it felt like I was sitting in a car. Sarah Berhane was with a teacher, and I was with a friend.

Imposters

by Hannah Leibee

On February 27th, I Hannah Leibee, met with Colin Farrow, the Imposter. He told me his story. It was completely different from the rumors I heard. The night it happened he was with his friend, Chance May, and it was a Saturday night and it was going by slow. They wanted to do something hilarious! But, they wanted to also go to the movies too. So they decided to dress up as "Gangsters" and go to the movie. As they were acting as someone there not people would be giving them ridiculous facial expressions responded Colin. As he was telling the story he wouldn't be looking at me most of the time as almost as he was embarrassed. He told me the rest of the story saying they were running around the movie theater and being loud and obnoxious, eventually getting kicked out for disrupting there movie, the people in the audience yelling out when they were leaving "Thank God!" But, all they did was laugh because that was his hilarious moment.

Johnny's Hilarious Moment

by Kathryn Figueroa

"Hello, thank your for being here, I like that Nike hoodie." I said to Johnny Sanchez. While smiling and tapping his pencil Johnny Sanchez admits that he had a hilarious moment. Johnny said, "It was at my house". He was smiling while remembering the moment. I asked if he knew any hilarious moments about one of his friends and he said, "Yes, when he was sleeping my friends and I drew on him," Johnny said while laughing. "Have you had any hilarious moment?" I asked. "Yeah", he admitted. Then I said, "Would you like to tell me about it?" "Sure," Johnny said. "Well, I was in my house with my cousins, uncle, and aunt. Then, while I was watching TV I tripped and fell out of the couch," he said. I said, "Ha-ha, that's actually pretty funny." While giggling, Johnny Sanchez said, "yeah, really funny". "Well thank you for having sometime for this talk", I said. At the end while smiling he said, "no problem."

Egg Rock

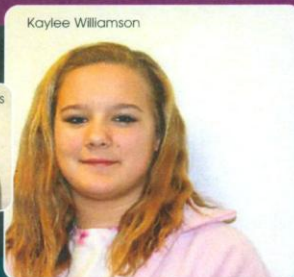

by Haley Stegeman

"Yea, it feels funny on my insides," Jimmie Payton laughed when I asked him if he liked to laugh. We were constantly laughing during my interview on February 27 at 10:25 am in the media center at Lakeview Middle School. We talked about who makes him laugh, what they do to make him laugh, and a hilarious story where he laughed so hard he lost his breath.

"My cousin found an egg in a parking lot and decided we would take care of it," he said with a grin from ear to ear. "And at some point during that time he had decided he was going to see if it broke when he threw it on the ground." Jimmy has laughed nonstop while telling his story, but he finally caught his breath and continues, "And when he threw the egg on the ground it didn't break, so he kept on throwing it down. He picked it up and looked at it carefully and his pet egg turned out to be a rock!" We both laughed to hard we cried.

Jimmie could barely tell the story without bursting out laughing in the middle, but when he did get all his giggles out the story made my interview a great success. Overall, the interview was so much fun and I feel like I got to know Jimmie Payton better that day.

students) (SHARE

An Embarrassing Experience by Caley Row

"I think everyone has had an embarrassing moment. I had Robert Neill in my interview with Kaylee Harper in my interview with Kaylee Harper. During my interview with Robert I answered some pretty embarrassing questions that I was going to share with you today. "Who would you like to witness have an embarrassing moment?" I asked Robert. "Well, my mother-in-law, I think I would like to see a teacher have an embarrassing moment." He said he thought of the thought of embarrassing with a student. "How do you feel the way of your first embarrassing experience?" I asked Robert. "I think it's a little bit embarrassing to see a student laughing at you." "Well she are like a fourth grade kid in my opinion in my class she got mad because she was laughing at me." He said he was laughing because the embarrassing thing. "I'm so sorry that happened to you." I said Robert. "Thank you," said Robert. "What would you like to remember it as?"

Change: Good vs. Bad by Cy Booth

Finish the statement "My best friend_____." For Kaylee Harper her best friend was her number one source for all of her life problems. This part of her world was turned upside down with the news from her parents that she would be moving to a new school. This abrupt change meant no longer having her best friend to turn to everyday; which made Kaili cry as she stated on Monday February 27 at 10:18 AM in the Lakeview Media Center for an interview with me. I started to ask Kaylee Harper a question that stated "Do you get embarrassed easily?" Kaylee started to nod her head in a yes ward motion and replied with the word yes. I asked her what she does when she gets embarrassed. She thought about it for a brief second and then said that she laughs it out and acts like nothing happened. Then I asked her who she goes to when she has an embarrassing moment and she just has to tell someone?

I decided to quickly write questions to get a sad story from her in my chicken-scratch writing. I put on my professional face and I was determined to get a good story out of her. I decided to ask her what she does when she gets sad besides cry because, I already know that's a reaction from all humans when you are faced with a sad situation. She explains that she sits on her bed. Then I asked why she does that. She told me that she falls asleep to get her mind off the sad moment. I decided that I would ask her to please "Tell me a story about when she was sad?" She told me that she got sad and was forced to cry because she moved to Missouri and left behind her best friend behind. I took her picture and I concluded the interview.

Good Boy Goes Bad

by Daria Ghasemi

"It was my first time, I swear!" Ryan Wissman said at his February 27th interview in the Lakeview Media Center. He is an 8th grader here at Lakeview and is on the Eagles team. One of Ryan's most embarrassing moments happened the day before the interview. He had forgotten his homework for the very first time in Social Studies all year.

When he was asked how his teacher had reacted, he tapped his foot and clenched his hands just remembering the incident. "She yelled at me in front of the whole class! I could feel everyone's eyes staring at me," Ryan exclaimed. He had said his teacher has high expectations for her students. He also stated that his teacher gives out tons of homework. I interviewed some of Ryan's classmates to see what they thought. One person was Hannah Leibe. I asked her about the amount of homework and projects worth she said, "We have homework about every night; we also have big projects worth up to 400 points, too!" Forgetting your homework is definitely worth the embarrassment you have to go through. Ryan will not forget his homework again!

"How weird! Now she's working with the law!"

— Justin Gentzler

Office Morrow Gets in Trouble With the Law?

by Justin Gentzler

On February 27, 2012 at 8:55 in the Lakeview Media Center, I had the chance to interview Officer Morrow. Sounds like a troublemaker to me. I asked her what the most trouble her friend got in and she said her friend stole a street sign with her car and she got in trouble for it. She said the most trouble she got in was in high school Officer Morrow said high school and middle school were kind of hard for her. She was in school to become a crime scene investigator, but then after she was talking for awhile she revealed the secret. The most trouble she had gotten in was getting into a fight in high school. She was embarrassed to have to tell her parents and she received three days of out of school suspension. It was for standing up for herself. Now she is working as a police officer? How weird! Now she works with the law.

Catch That Horse Fly!

by Hannah Winkler

On February 27, 2012 in Lakeview Middle School at 10:25 am, I met with Sarah Lian Berhane. When she first sat down with me, I could tell she was really nervous, but at the same time very polite. She kept her hands in her lap for most of the time. "Yes! I do have a sense of humor!" Sarah said positively. With a smile and a nod of the head, she stated, "I do laugh easily, all the time!" During our discussion, I could tell that she did have a sense of humor.

With a slight pause, Sarah said she loves her friend's "attitude and their sense of humor." But she couldn't name a certain friend, but she did seem to mention her twin sister Lena, a lot. So I came to a conclusion that her and her sister have a lot of fun together. When I asked her if she has ever made herself laugh, she said, "Yes, I do!" with a little smirk and hint of embarrassment.

When Sarah's confidence was high, I asked her if she could tell a story of the time she laughed so hard she almost cried. She told me that one time in the summer at church camp, her and her friends had a water balloon fight. And all of a sudden a humongous horse fly landed on Sarah's leg. She was scared but at the same time laughing really hard!

(STU) dents

Forgiving Fiber by Emery Langhorn

No eye contact, very hesitant, and spacey. These are just a few of all the reactions to my questions by Kaleb James Cote in the Lakeview Middle School media center Monday morning. In our interview, Kaleb shared that he considered himself a forgiving person. Well, I consider him a liar, liar, pants on fire!

When asked a few questions he responded with short, hesitant answers. I asked Kaleb when someone was most disappointed by him. His answer, "Um, when I rolled my eyes at my mom?" while answering he was in every other direction with his hands crossed. Then, I asked him what he was most disappointed about he responds, "When my mom took my phone for rolling my eyes at her?" He asked all of these questions with an unsure question like response. So, Kaleb says he's forgiving, doesn't like new people, and was most disappointed when he got his phone taken away.

Reader, I warn you, Kaleb Cote: repeated offender of fibbing!

Lakeview Revealed

"...this scarecrow man jumped out at me with a chain saw and yelled my name..."

"...when she burped so loud that we laughed so hard that..."

"...three story--and we're not talking a stack of Toy Story movies here-- jump..."

Face Plant

by Samantha Taylor

"I laugh and giggle when I'm embarrassed," says Claire Granger while letting out a laugh. To get more out of her I continuously asked questions. I then asked, "Who do you get embarrassed around?" With that, she answered, "People I want good opinions of." On February 27, 2012 I was interviewing Claire Aubrey Granger. My goal was to get an embarrassing moment out of her, while sitting at a table in Lakeview Middle School's media center around 8 a.m. To wrap up our funny conversation, I asked, "Would you mind telling me a story of a time you had a really embarrassing moment?" She stretched her arms and starts to laugh, she says blushing, "Well, this one guy...tripped me and I face planted the ground in the hallway around the beginning of this seventh grade years." We busted out laughing, how embarrassing! In the end, I thanked her for coming and led her out the door to leave.

Wedding Bells

by Grace White

"My parents' dog and cat would not stop fighting." I started interviewing Ms. Lisa Abbott, hoping to get a funny story. But when I found out she had been visiting Iowa for her sister's bridal shower, I decided to switch tactics and ask more about the wedding. She had been in Iowa just this previous weekend, and her sister and future brother-in-law had their shower together.

"So you are the maid of honor?" I asked. "No, my older sister is, but I am one of the bridesmaids," she explained. While talking about the shower and the wedding, she seemed happy and anxious with a twinkle in her eye. "And are you excited?" I asked. "Yes, very...[the wedding] is March 31."

Crazy Corn Stalkers

by Kandace Eichhorst

"Yes, always!" Rachel Brawn exclaimed as she laughed hysterically. "I can never stop fearing thing. Especially mirrors and clowns." Since we were running out of time, I decided to move on to the big question. "So, Rachel, can you tell me a story of the time you were really afraid?" I asked in curiosity. "Yes. Actually the last time I got the most afraid was when I went to the corn field during World of Fun Halloween Haunt." I nodded for her to go on. "It was just last year and when I was in the field, this scarecrow man jumped out at me with a chainsaw and yelled my name. I freaked out so I just split right out of these." We both laughed at the silly story, but when she was telling about it I notice that she responded nervously. Rachel explained her five minutes of heart racing fear before I asked the last question. "So did you ever find out how this man knew your name?" I questioned. She looked a time eye to eye and said, "My friend told him what I looked like and then told him my name so he could scare me." "Did you ever forgive your friend?" I asked. "Yes, we both laughed hard at it." Since I got my story, I decided to wrap everything up, so we shook hands and left. This interview went very well.

One Funny Story

by Matthew Dieleman

"All the girls come up to me with their drama," Susan Morrow laughed. She had told me that in the morning girls come up to her with their drama about all the boys. "It's quite funny actually," she told me. She had told me that she was a quiet kid back in her childhood. She was shy and didn't talk a lot at home or school. We laughed the whole time during the interview on February 28th with Susan Morrow. At eight in the morning in her office we talked about her childhood, kid, and mom and dad.

"We were in McDonalds on a Saturday and my sister had been drinking some soda when she burped so loud that we laughed so hard that the manager had to come and tell us to be quiet," Susan laughed. She said her mom and dad had been really funny back when she was a kid. I had been aching to get a better story out of her. "It was just a couple of days ago when my 5 year old son had come home from school and had a paper written about Optimus Prime. After I read the paper, I laughed so hard that I was about to cry," Susan had explained. All and all it was a great interview, this was the funny stories of Susan Morrow.

The Hysterical Moment

by Marco Herrejon

"Ha-ha," as Chris Freeman laughed during every question I asked him. The first sight I got of Chris Freeman: he came in a very calm and ordinary seventh grader. But as soon as I asked him, "did you ever get in trouble at school?" He responded while turning bright red, "yes." Of course I started off with simple questions. "When was a time you were very embarrassed?" He nervously said, "next question!" while looking down. My last question was, "have you ever laughed so hard you felt your abs hurt?" His responded, "ha, ha, right now!" "How is that feeling?" I asked. Chris responded, "well, it feels like I have a six pack and it hurts," he said, laughing. I said, "no, really?" and ended our interview.

The Jump

by Genesis Herring

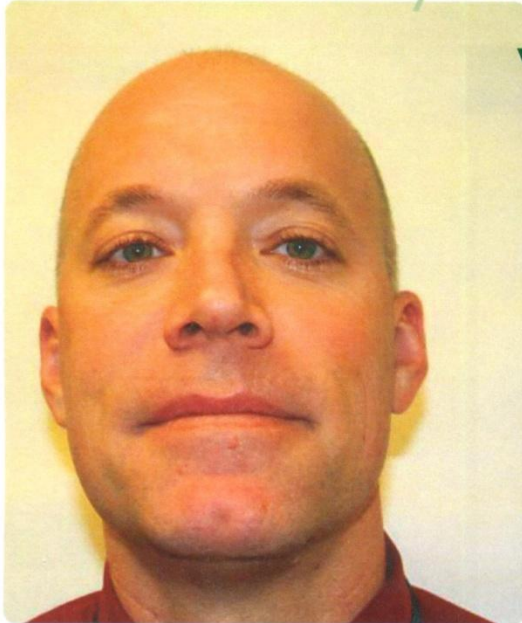

Greg Chambers kicked the couch when we began his interview on February 27, 2012 at 10:25 in the morning. There was a chilly draft in the media center, but faces reddened as I revealed his most embarrassing story. To get the best interview for my tell all article possible, I began by asking Greg if he often tripped and stumbled. He responded by saying, "Yea. Every once in awhile, sometimes." He then went into a story of how a walk upstairs didn't work so well. He laughed as he concluded the story, but wait! The juiciest moment is still to come.

I asked Greg what year he had been born, just out of sheer curiosity. His birthday was this past Tuesday, on February 28. He was born in 1998, so, as I was joking around, I asked, "So you've had fourteen years to be a klutz?" He chuckled and said, "Yea, I guess." He said his most-not-really-embarrassing moment was when he was trapped on the third floor of an apartment building by a fierce dog, blocking his only way of escape.

Hold up on that, it couldn't be his only exit. Let me tell you, it's amazing how brave this kid is! To escape the fierce dog, he took a literal flying leap of faith through the air! Once Greg landed, I was told, "I know the dog didn't jump, but I didn't take the chance of looking back. I just kept running." My pen scrambled across the page to keep up with all of the information flowing out of his mouth.

He remembered much of the incident considering it was a decent while ago. A three story--and we're not talking a stack of Toy Story movies here--jump, a brave kid, and a giant mutt. Using his hands, he gesticulated to show me the layout of the buildings and how he managed to get out alive. Greg just smiled and nodded, recalling the terrifyingly, and a little bit funny, memory of jumping off of a building. This kid, though, was different. He jumped intending to live.

by Joshua Hall
Zippers Down:
An Interview of

Van Batavia

As I walked into Mr. Van Batavia's office, I thought about how organized and clean it was. I complimented his Lynx tie. I asked him if he had ever been really embarrassed, and he said, "Yes" while he twiddled with his ID tag. I then asked him if he would like to disappear when he is embarrassed. Most of you would probably say yes, but Mr. Van Batavia said a confident, "No." He said he likes the attention, even if it isn't the best kind of attention. My next question was, "Who is the most embarrassed person you've ever seen?" He replied, "My sister." He didn't elaborate. The next question was a little bit more personal. "What makes you embarrassed?" "When my zipper is down," he said hesitantly. I then asked him when he was most embarrassed. "When I forgot to zip my zipper up at a job interview. I got really embarrassed. I got the job, though." Then I told him to tell me when one of his friends was really embarrassed. He said, "When my friend Troy and I were out ice fishing and he went to a thin patch of ice he knew he shouldn't stand on, and he fell through the ice."

On February 27, 2012, an interview took place in a quiet serene place, also known as the media center. Jin Lin unleashed his memories, as well as his friends', as I asked him questions about his life. Jin Tal Lin is a seventh grader who is proud of himself and his family. He is rather outgoing and funny, and willing to share his and his friends' experiences. "So has your friend ever had any funny moments in his life that you know about?" I asked him eagerly. "Everything!" he said with a slight chuckle. "Is there anything he has told you in particular that made you laugh?" I asked. "Well, on the first day of school, he accidentally sat at the eighth grade side of the lunchroom." he replied back with a smile. I gave a slight laugh at that, and then decided to ask another question: this time about himself. I asked several questions, but he seemed unsure about what to say. Finally, I got that answer that I was looking for. "So what was the best moment of your life?" I asked. After he said, "the day he was born" he gave me a good answer. "Probably when I got a new computer," he replied. The interview with Jin Tal Lin was a success, thanks to his compatibility and my frequent questions. It was nice to get to know him, and I would certainly have a conversation with him again.

Secrets Exposed
by JD Nassab

Just Another Mistake

By Ariana Corbin

"It reminds me of that when the jokes by the TV two episodes go by." Domiyen Porter announced laughing on a weekly Sunday morning. Domiyen and I got a chance to quickly talk in the media center. Domiyen made it clear to me that she always loved jokes, especially when people are in some kind of pain. She said that one of her favorite movies on MTV is a show called Pain Pranks. After several jokes and stories were shared between the both of us, Domiyen told me about the time she went ice skating with her friend and her friend was wearing a shirt and not having his shirt buttons fastened. I asked Domiyen what she did and she responded with, "I laughed." "Did you stand there and laugh?" I inquired. She responded with a rolled eye. "I did."

Continuing, I asked Domiyen about any funny stories that may have happened to her. A quick look flashed across my interviewee's face as she described a customer when she decided to go eat raisins on her driveway. She described her routine on that hot driveway that day and began to eat them, only to find out that one of the raisins she ate was a worm. She described to me laughing about how the worms juice squirted everywhere. Me covering my mouth in laughter me

Domiyen Porter announced laughing on a weekly Sunday morning. Domiyen and I got a chance to quickly talk in the media center. Domiyen made it clear to me that she always loved jokes, especially when people are in some kind of pain. She said that one of her favorite movies on MTV is a show called Pain Pranks. After several jokes and stories were shared between the both of us, Domiyen told me about the time she went ice skating with her friend and her friend was wearing a shirt and not having his shirt buttons fastened. I asked Domiyen what she did and she responded with, "I laughed." "Did you stand there and laugh?" I inquired. She responded with a rolled eye. "I did."

Continuing, I asked Domiyen about any funny stories that may have happened to her. A quick look flashed across my interviewee's face as she described a customer when she decided to go eat raisins on her driveway. She described her routine on that hot driveway that day and began to eat them, only to find out that one of the raisins she ate was a worm. She described to me laughing about how the worms juice squirted everywhere. Me covering my mouth in laughter me

